The Great Newspaper of the Great West.

In inviting attention to the merits of the Kansas City Star it seems proper to point to a few facts demonstrating its very great success as a newspaper. The Star is the largest customer of the Kansas City post office. Last year it paid Uncle Sam over $58,000 for postage. Though it receives daily the full news reports of the Associated Press—the greatest news-gathering organization in the world—it receives in addition such an abundance of special dispatches that it is the largest patron of both the Western Union and Postal telegraph companies in Kansas City. It consumes 1,500,000 pounds of white paper a month. It is printed upon five great Quadruple Perfecting Presses—the largest equipment of newspaper printing machinery in the United States west of Chicago. Such facts as these indicate large revenues and vast expenditures. To print in Kansas City—the seventeenth city in size in the United States—a newspaper which is not out-ranked by any other, anywhere, as is the fact in the case of "The Star"—is an achievement that is only possible when the friendship and appreciation of the reading public is attracted and maintained upon a great scale. A multitude of readers, making the advertising space valuable to merchants and manufacturers and thereby producing the large revenues necessary for the expense of publication such a paper, can be obtained only by years of persistent endeavor to improve and develop the publication to the utmost limit of its possibilities. That, in brief, has been the history of the Kansas City Star. From the day it earned its first profits it has steadily turned back its revenues into improving its quality and scope. This policy, consistently adhered to for twenty-two years, has brought its reward. The Kansas City Star is now unquestionably the Great Newspaper of the Great West. It has a larger circulation, in proportion to the population of the city in which it is printed, than any other newspaper. Its daily circulation is above 105,000. It was the first newspaper to give its readers a full week's issue, delivered by carrier, seven days for 10 cents. It was the first to establish a weekly edition for 25 cents a year. The Weekly Star—containing the concentrated news of the world and good reading for the whole family—has over 325,000 paid-in-advance subscribers. The Star's news-gathering facilities are unequalled and the news is untainted by prejudice or partisanship. Its market reports are complete, intelligent and accurate. Its miscellaneous reading matter is chosen with the utmost care. Its illustrations add value to its news and literature. Its editorial policy is for advancement and progress. Its advertisers are the best and most trustworthy merchants and manufacturers, with a range of products meeting every need. d228
